Introduction

This document was written to accompany a workshop on the ‘Is’ verb. I have included a lot of technical information because I know that people will want to refer back to it long after the workshop has passed and quickly written notes only go so far in helping the memory.

It uses techniques that have helped me over the years to become more comfortable with this topic. Other teachers will have their own way of communicating this information. Diversity of thought on the matter is useful.

In my opinion, one of the difficulties for learners regarding the ‘Is’ verb is that as learners of Gaelic we spend as much time as we can avoiding it, dreading it, feeling insecure about it and, finally, negatively reinforcing ourselves regarding our use of it. So, when we can’t avoid using it, it is frequently used incorrectly. For this document, I’m contriving a situation where the verb ‘Bi’ is intentionally diminished and ‘Is’ is favored. I hope that this will break the fear of ‘is’ and provide as complete and reassuring experience as possible.

Another goal I have for this examination of the ‘Is’ verb is to see it in use in a number of useful constructions. Often this means I will give you a simple example of a form, then pair it with another topic. This will expand the ‘Is’ verb’s utility, providing more opportunities to practice. It is wise to make sure you can use the simple forms before moving on to the intermediate and advanced examples.

I have attached the complete list of Gaelic/English translations of my example sentences at the end of the document.

‘Is’ - “The other verb - ‘to be’ ”

People often fear what they don’t understand and many learners of Gaelic don’t understand the ‘Is’ verb. This is reasonable. A lot of learners avoid the ‘Is’ verb and, as a result, never master it. Most of the ‘learn Gaelic’ books don’t help. They offer incomplete or confusing explanations. Older books use examples which have fallen out of favor in current times. Some books avoid discussing the verb at all, or only mention the minimum necessary. What follows is what I have gathered through experience and research.

- There are two verbs ‘to be’ in Gaelic - ‘Bi’ and ‘Is.’ For people who only speak English, it is very difficult to begin the process of differentiating when to use one version of ‘to be’ versus another. It will require, time, practice and patience. Don’t give up!
- ‘Is’ is referred to by many names: ‘the copula’ (a fancy name for “the verb ‘to be’” joining/equating two nouns) and ‘the assertive verb’ (an assertion is made that is beyond doubt), being two such names.
- Some people say that ‘Bi’ is used for things that change rapidly (think mood, weather, etc.) while ‘Is’ is used for things that change slowly or not at all (nationality or occupation (for most people)).
- Some people say that ‘Bi’ describes while ‘Is’ defines (or emphasizes).
- ‘Bi’ is used for a wider array of purposes, while ‘Is’ is used for specific purposes and as a result learners don’t practice ‘Is’ often.

Here’s a few key things to know about Gaelic verbs in general:

- Each form should be unique to avoid ambiguity
- There are two kinds of verbs that we must know immediately: tensed verbs (have a time element) and un-tensed verbs (no time element)
- Using the imperative form of the verb and knowing the rules, one can make all the forms of the tensed verbs.
- Using the verbal noun form of the verb and knowing the rules, one can make all the forms of the un-tensed verbs.
- This is why one should always learn the imperative and verbal noun forms when learning a new verb.
- Gaelic is a verb initial language and so there are four forms students need to learn. There is one independent form, which consists of one word, and three dependent forms, which are comprised of two or more words. The particles ‘Cha,’ ‘An,’ and ‘Nach’ of the dependent forms are recycled for every verb in the language.
- There are four pieces of information that tensed verb forms should communicate: Tense, Meaning, positive or negative, and statement or question.

On the following page is a chart that compares ‘Bi’ to ‘Is’; diagrams where the four key pieces of information are found; shows the recyclability of ‘Cha,’ ‘An,’ and ‘Nach’; and exposes one of the ‘Is’ verb’s difficulties - that the verb part disappears in the present tense!

Bi and Is: Compared and Diagrammed

	Bi (Irregular, only verb to have all tenses)	Is (Irregular & defective - no future tense)
Present Tense	T, M, +, ● Tha (Independent form, one word)	T, M, +, ● Is (Independent form, one word)
	-, ● T, M Chan eil (Dependent form, more than one word)	-, ● T, M Cha ☁ (Dependent form, more than one word)
	+, ? T, M A(m) bheil	+, ? T, M An ☁ 'Cha,' 'An,' and 'Nach' are recycled!
	-, ? T, M Nach eil	-, ? T, M Nach ☁ I use a cloud to represent the missing part of Is.
Past Tense	T, M, +, ● Bha	T, M, +, ● Bu* 'Bu' likes to lenite, but not 's,' 't,' or 'd.'
	-, ● T, M Cha robh	-, ● T, M Cha bu* 'Cha' usually likes to lenite, but not here.
	+, ? T, M An robh	+, ? T, M Am bu* Before vowels, 'Bu' frequently becomes "B" "
	-, ? T, M Nach robh	-, ? T, M Nach bu*
Future	T, M, +, ● Bithidh / Bidh	'Is' has no future tense! Why? My thought: You can't assert that something IS that hasn't happened yet.
	-, ● T, M Cha bhi	Note: All four bits of information are contained in the one word of the independent form!
	+, ? T, M Am bi	Key: T = tense, M = meaning, + = positive, - = negative, ? = question, ● = statement.
	-, ? T, M Nach bi

Form 1: Is + personal pronoun + definite noun

This simplest form of the ‘Is’ verb is where the ‘Is’ verb is used with a personal pronoun for definition. The emphatic pronouns should be used (mise, thusa (tusa), esan, ise, sinne, sibhse, iadsan). “To say a person or thing is a person or thing, use a form of IS” (Black, 1997, page 25).

‘Is’ Present Tense: the usual four forms, using the column method:

	Verb		Subject (Pronoun)		Predicate (Definite Noun)
1)	Is		mise		Goraidh.
2)	Cha ☁		mhise		Anna.	[Chan before vowels]
3)	An ☁		esan		am bèicear?	[Am before m, b, f, p]
4)	Nach ☁		iadsan		na bèicearean?

In the dependent forms of the verb (the one that requires more than one word), ‘Is’ disappears in the present tense leaving only the recyclable ‘Cha,’ ‘An,’ and ‘Nach’ particles. For conceptual diagrams, I like to use a little cloud symbol to fill in the missing part of the verb, to show that the spirit of ‘Is’ lives on (perhaps playing a harp while resting on the cloud) but is not represented by letters. Visually including the cloud makes ‘Is’ behave more like other verbs. This does not violate the principle that tensed verb forms should be unique to avoid ambiguity because ‘Is’ is the only verb to do this. In other words, with its visual absence, ‘Is’ is telling you which verb is present. Wrap your head around that! ‘Is’ is visually absent in the present dependent forms, but not in the past tense.

‘Is’ Past Tense: the usual four forms, using the column method:

	Verb		Subject (Pronoun)		Predicate (Definite Noun)
5)	Bu*		mhise		am fear.	Bu* likes to lenite, but not:
6)	Cha bu*		mhise		an tè.	the usual: l, n, r, vowels
7)	Am b’*		esan		am bèicear?	or: s, d, and t (d & t = the To Die for rule)
8)	Nach b’*		iadsan		na bèicearean?	Bu becomes B’ before vowels.

No more cloud as ‘bu’ steps in to make things follow the usual pattern that we are familiar with.

Next, we explore some simple sentences. Note: ‘thusa’ usually becomes ‘tusa’ when used with the ‘Is’ verb.

Form 1: Intermediate Sentences (adding a simple relative clause with ‘bi’):

The simple sentences can define, but are otherwise limited in utility. In the following sentences we attach a ‘Bi’ clause on the end to add more information. The ‘a’ can be translated as ‘who.’ Note: once we start adding more information, we assume there is a larger context.

- 23) An esan am bèicear a bha aig a’ chèilidh a-raoir? ’S e. / Chan e.
(Note the response matches the ‘Is’ verb at the front, not the ‘Bi’ verb in the middle.)
- 24) Is esan am bèicear a bha aig a’ chèilidh a-raoir.
- 25) Chan esan am bèicear a bha aig a’ chèilidh a-raoir.
- 26) An ise am bèicear a tha a’ dèanamh na cèice? ’S i. / Chan i.
(Note the use of the genitive form of cake following the verbal noun. This is most proper but disappearing in modern usage.)
- 27) Is ise am bèicear a tha a’ dèanamh na cèice.
- 28) Chan ise am bèicear a tha a’ dèanamh na cèice.
- 29) Nach iadsan na bèicearean a bhitheas a’ dèanamh na cèice airson na bainnse? ’S iad. / Chan iad.
- 30) Is iadsan na bèicearean a bhitheas a’ dèanamh na cèice airson na bainnse.
- 31) Chan iadsan na bèicearean a bhitheas a’ dèanamh na cèice airson na bainnse.
- 32) An esan am bèicear nach robh aig a’ chèilidh a-raoir? ’S e. / Chan e.
- 33) Nach esan am bèicear nach robh aig a’ chèilidh a-raoir? ’S e. / Chan e.
- 34) An ise an còcaire nach eil ag obair an-diugh? ’S i. / Chan i.
- 35) An iadsan na h-oileanaich nach bi ag ionnsachadh Gàidhlig? ’S iad. / Chan iad.

Form 1: Advanced Sentences:

With these advanced sentences, we are getting a little fancier and our relative clauses use verbs other than 'Bi.'

- 36) An esan an còcaire a tha a' còcaireachd an-dràsta aig an taigh-bìdh ri taobh na h-aibhne? 'S e. / Chan e.
- 37) An ise am boireannach a cheannaich cèicean aig bùth nan cèicean beaga? 'S i. / Chan i. (M)
- 38) An tusa am bancair a choisich suas an rathad aig leth-uair às dèidh trì an-dè? 'S mi. / Cha mhì.
- 39) An sibhse na h-oileanaich a nì an obair-dachaidh agaibh a-nochd? Is sibh. / Cha sibh.
- 40) An sibhse am fear-teagaisg a theagaisgeas an clas an ath sheachdainn? Is sibh. / Cha sibh.

Form 2: 'S e + definite noun + definite noun

In this form we introduce the impersonal pronoun 'e' meaning 'it.' Normally a pronoun stands in for another noun, but in this case it does not. This is why I call this 'e' the 'philosophical it.' I have also seen it referred to as an 'augment.' The 'philosophical it' is almost always 'e,' although sometimes in old books, poetry and song you might see 'i.' 'E' is preferred today.

When 'Is' is augmented, the positive and negative responses tend to be reduced to “ 'S e” and “Chan e” respectively, but watch out for “ 'S i” and “Chan i” in answers making direct references to females.

'Is' Present Tense: the usual four forms of the verb:

	Verb + augment		Subject (Definite Noun)		Predicate (Definite Noun)
61)	(Is e) 'S e		Anndra		am bèicear.

'Is' Past Tense: the usual four forms of the verb:

	Verb + augment		Subject (Definite Noun)		Predicate (Definite Noun)
65)	B' e		Dùghlas		am fear.	Bu* likes to lenite, but in this case the augment prevents lenition from affecting the subject.
66)	Cha b' e		Eilidh		an tè.
67)	Am b' e		Flòraidh		am bèicear?
68)	Nach b' e		Ùna		am bancair?

Form 3: “ ’S e ” and “ ’S ann ” for defining and emphasis

Form 3: Part 1: “ ’S e ... a ... ” (Defining using ‘Is’ and indefinite nouns)

“Is e” becomes “ ’S e ” and is the form to use when defining a noun with an indefinite noun. Using this format we can define details about ourselves such as our nationalities and occupations. Remember, in Forms 1 and 2, we were using DEFINITE nouns, so we were saying such things as “I am THE baker” whereas with this form we can say, “I am A baker.”

Form 3: Part 1: “ ’S e ” Basic Format:

	Verb + Augment		Indefinite noun		Relative		Second Verb		Subject (requires preposition)
116)	'S e		oileanach		a		tha		annam.
117)	Chan ☘ e		tidsear		a		bha		ann an Alastair.
118)	An ☘ e		bèicear		a		bhios (bhitheas)		anns an duine?
119)	Nach ☘ e		còcaire math		a		tha		ann?

It is possible to use the past tense of ‘Is’ with this format, however, most people these days will leave the ‘Is’ verb in the present tense and change the tense of the sentence in the Second Verb. This Second Verb allows us to create a FUTURE TENSE - and please note the use of the RELATIVE FUTURE form of the verb. In these examples, I have used the verb ‘Bi,’ but depending on the meaning, you could use just about any other verb.

Form 3: Part 1: Use with PEOPLE

“I’m a...” - This is how we talk about/define ourselves. Learners usually come across this construction when they want to talk about their nationality and occupations. I have included a list of occupations and nationalities in Appendix 2.

When used with people, we can use an alternate sentence structure using ‘Bi.’ However, before you get too excited, it requires the use of the NAM/NAD construction. Appendix 4 has an additional side-order of NAM/NAD for interested parties.

- 120) 'S e oileanach a th' annam. [It is a student that is in me.]
[I am a student.]
- 121) 'S e tidsear a th' ann an Alastair. [It is a teacher that is in Alastair.]
[Alastair is a teacher.]
- 122) 'S e bèicear a th' anns an duine. [It is a baker that is in the man.]
[The man is a baker.]
- 123) 'S e còcaire math a th' ann. [It is a good cook that is in him.]
[He is a good cook.]

Ann	In
annam	in me
annad	in you
ann	in him
innte	in her
annainn	in us
annaibh	in you
annta	in them

Eisimpleirean eile

- 124) 'S e duine a th' annam.
- 125) 'S e duine snog a th' annam.
- 126) 'S e tidsear a th' annam.
- 127) An e tidsear a th' ann an Goraidh? 'S e. 'S e tidsear a th' ann (an Goraidh). Chan e. 'S e còcaire a th' ann an Goraidh.
- 128) Nach e Spàinnteach a th'ann an Goraidh? 'S e. 'S e Spàinnteach a th' ann. Chan e. 'S e Ameireaganach a th' ann.
- 129) An e bèicear a th' ann? 'S e. / Chan e.
- 130) Nach e bean-ghlùine a th' ann am Màiri? 'S e. / Chan e.
- 131) Chan e dotair a th' ann an Lachlann, 's e nurs a th' ann.
- 132) 'S e dotair a th' ann an Calum, nach e? 'S e. 'S e dotair a th' ann an Calum agus 's e nurs a th' anns a' bhean aige.

Form 3: Part 1: Use with OBJECTS

This is the only form we have to use to define indefinite, inanimate objects. While we had to use definite nouns in Forms 1 and 2, we can use them here too, making this construction ‘all purpose.’

Also, if you are asked, “What is this?” or “What is that?” (Dè a th’ ann (an seo/sin/siud?), this is the form to use. (Answers like: It’s)

- 133) 'S e baile mòr a th’ ann an Dùn Èideann.
- 134) Dè [a] tha [ann an] sin?
- 135) 'S e an doras a th’ ann.
- 136) 'S e doras a th’ ann.
- 137) 'S e caora bheag shnog a th’ ann (th’ innte).
- 138) 'S e leabhar fada a th’ ann an ‘Lord of the Rings,’ nach e?

Eisimpleirean Eile

- 143) 'S e bàta mòr a cheannaich Raibeart.
- 144) 'S e cù mòr dona a tha agam.

Form 3: Part 2: “ ’S e ” and “ ’S ann ” for Emphasis

In Part 1, we were defining using “ ’S e.” We can also use “Is” to emphasize specific words in a sentence through a process called “fronting.” Fronting brings words closer to the beginning of a sentence, which emphasizes them. However, “ ’S e ” only works on some kinds of words. For the kinds of words that “ ’S e ” doesn’t work with, we use “ ’S ann.”

’S e works with: nouns, demonstrative pronouns, sometimes personal pronouns and noun phrases.

’S ann works with: adjectives, adverbs, demonstrative adverbs, prepositional phrases, prepositional pronouns, verbal nouns, verbs.

Form 3: “ ’S ann ” Basic Format

	Verb + Ann		Appropriate Words		Relative		Second Verb		Subject
145)	'S ann		sgìth		a		tha		mi.
146)	Chan ☘ ann		aig an doras		a		bha		Alastair.
147)	An ☘ ann		a-màireach		a		bhitheas		tu a' dol dhan sgoil?
148)	Nach ☘ ann		a' dèanamh cèic		a		tha		thu?

Just like with “ ’S e,” it is possible to use the past tense of ‘Is.’ However, once again, most people will leave the ‘Is’ verb in the present tense and change the tense of the sentence in the Second Verb. This Second Verb allows us to create a FUTURE TENSE - and please note the use of the RELATIVE FUTURE form of the verb. In these examples, I have used the verb ‘Bi,’ but depending on the meaning, you could use just about any other verb.

Mar eisimpleir:

- 149) Choisich mi dhan taigh-bìdh airson bracaist madainn an-diugh.
- 150) 'S e mise a choisich airson bracaist dhan taigh-bìdh madainn an-diugh. (as opposed to Bob...)

Appendix 4: A side order of NAM/NAD

Like nuclear fusion, occasionally, the preposition ‘ann’ and the possessive pronouns must combine.

Here’s how it works:

ann + mo* = nam*	in my
ann + do* = nad*	in your ann + a* = na*	in his
ann + a = na	in her (h- before vowels)
ann + ar = nar	in our (n- before vowels)
ann + ur = nur	in your (n- before vowels)
ann + an = nan	in their (nam before b, f, m or p)
*causes lenition
